As school leaders you play a key role in shaping learning in your school. The learning culture and environment you promote are significant forces in the development of all your students.

An examination of the future of learning and the new Australian Curriculum is critical in effectively educating students for their role in an ever-changing world and should lead to a close consideration of “what is learning?”.

Understanding how students learn and encouraging students’ creativity and thinking skills are at the heart of good leadership.